

October 19, 2016 3:00 PM Some physics textbooks state that the equation for a collinear Doppler equation is  $f' = f \frac{v \pm v_o}{v \mp v_s}$ . In particular, I see that the equation used to determine the speed of sound is Doppler, but there is no error in it, because it determines the speed of sound in a vacuum, as well as in gas and liquid. And if I'm wrong, then there is an error in the equation, because it determines the speed of sound in a liquid, but not in a gas. But I don't understand what I misunderstood. I have read some of the equations and I see that there are many mistakes in the textbooks that I have read. I beg you, please help me.
