In an interview with the Telegraph in 2015, Mr Blair said there was no sense of hostility towards Mr Johnson: "I've always actually thought it was a mistake to be so hostile to him. He is the most dynamic, able and interesting figure in the Conservative Party. And I wanted him to win. I wanted Cameron to win. There would have been two very able and interesting figures. I can't even imagine how you would have handled that." Speaking about the possibility of a third term in Downing Street in the summer of 2015, Mr Blair described his relationship with Mr Cameron as "fantastic" and said: "I don't believe for a moment he's going to do anything like leaving as much as a vacuum. There will be someone there [to fill it]. It will not be someone as interesting as him and it won't be someone as able as him." Mr Blair also predicted that the Brexit referendum will take place in 2020, a year after Mr Johnson enters Downing Street. He said: "I'm sure it will be by 2020
